Water Delivery Company marks fifth anniversary

The Water Delivery Company is celebrating five years in business by expanding its operations, implementing an environmental policy and helping its local community.

The South London based firm that supplies businesses with water coolers and spring water has not only just opened a 6,000 sqft warehouse in Wimbledon, but it is also in talks to establish a North London branch.

Initially set up in 2002, the company has evolved from one man at the helm with two vans, to 25 members of staff and a customer list of thousands.

"The most important thing about our company is our customers and fortunately, our recent customer survey this year virtually had a 100% success rate," said owner, Robert Laughton.

The firm has also announced that it will be putting an environmental policy in place and becoming directly involved in community events. It recently sponsored a race at its local greyhound stadium and has stepped up plans to help its local school and bowls club.

"The environment is naturally important to us and so is the local community that we work in," continued Laughton. "We have come a long way in a short period of time and I am very optimistic about the future."
